Debate

Debate with speakers and other invitees with the key questions:

- What role should parliaments and civil society play in the accession process and how can their involvement be strengthened?
- What kind of processes, consultation procedures and access-to-information rules are useful to facilitate involvement of civil society and parliaments in the enlargement process?
- How has access to this information been organised in the accession countries and in Brussels so far, who has the information and decides on making it public or not, and how?
- Where are possible bottlenecks in public and parliamentary access to information, could those be resolved?
