The Russian Presence in the European Energy Market

Policy solutions public conference

ABOUT THE CONFERENCE

The objective of the Greens/EFA and Policy Solutions' joint conference is to investigate and debate Russian energy investments in the EU and their overall impact. As significant portion of Russian FDI are connected to Russian energy exports, the European institutions and Member States face several dilemmas. First, the crucial role of Russian energy for the European economy and the key role of Russia in European energy supply creates a dependence that can automatically undermine any sanctions regime against Russia and leaves Europe vulnerable. Second, the large and growing role of the Russian state in Russian energy production and exports, and hence the massive direct influence it wields over an industry that is so vital for the economic operations of the EU. Third, the fact that Russian energy policy, exports and FDI are near exclusively directed at either fossil fuels, which make up a vast majority, or nuclear energy, while renewables play no role. Hence growing Russian investments imply more fossil fuel distribution or increased nuclear energy production, neither of which meshes with the long term objectives of European energy production and the energy mix the EU wishes to attain. The Conference on the Russian Presence in the European Energy Market starts with an opening address by MEP Benedek Jávör, followed by the presentation of a related study by Policy Solutions. The conference will feature two 1-hour panels. The first panel involves policy experts with knowledge of the role of Russian-EU ties in the area of energy. The second panel includes prominent representatives of different EU institutions bringing different perspectives to the debate. The conference will be closed by Rebecca Harms, Co-President of the Greens/EFA group. The conference is open for all interested experts, journalists and politicians.
