

With this letter, we would like to express our support for the nomination of Leyla Yunus for the European Parliament's 2014 Sakharov Prize. (...)

Esteemed members of the European Parliament! Leyla Yunus, as well as her husband Arif, has worked for many years to defend human rights, develop democracy and protect ethnic minorities from discrimination. She would be a most worthy recipient of the European Parliament's Sakharov Prize for Freedom of Thought. (...)

Awarding her the prize would also help protect her, Arif and the other 96 recorded political prisoners in Azerbaijan from further persecution and draw attention to the disgraceful human rights situation in a country that is a member of the Council of Europe. (...)

The award could make a positive impact on the overall situation in Azerbaijan before it becomes too late for many people.

"Leyla Yunus is one of the country's most prominent human rights defenders and protagonists of women's leadership. (...)

She has served as a role model to human rights defenders in her own country and beyond, and is particularly dedicated to women's leadership in peace and security issues in the South Caucasus region. (...)

She has been innovative in her human rights activism by her ability to combine the traditional work of human rights defense (...) with very direct, strategic action at the right time and place. This is witnessed by her outspokenness and ability to generate broad awareness on issues of human rights and peacebuilding. "

Awarding Leyla the Sakharov Prize would tell the Aliyev regime in Baku that a government cannot simultaneously persecute dissidents and claim to be respectable. It might also save her life, increasing pressure for her release.

Calls on the Azerbaijani authorities to cease their harassment and intimidation of civil society organisations, opposition politicians and independent journalists and to refrain from interfering in or undermining their valuable work for the development of democracy in Azerbaijan;

Deplores the actions taken by the Azerbaijani Government to curb contacts between civil society and youth activists and intellectuals from Armenia and Azerbaijan, since these contacts are of major importance for bridging the long-standing hostility between the two countries; in this regard, recalls the important work done in this area by Leyla Yunus and her husband Arif;
