Let's support Syrians in rebuilding

MEP Hannah Neumann during plenary debate

After the sudden collapse of Bashar al-Assad's brutal regime in Syria, the country aims to rebuild. While the geopolitical implications and the humanitarian situation in the region are debated in the European Parliament, Greens/EFA MEP Hannah Neumann, the Group's coordinator in the Committee on Foreign Affairs, comments on the situation:

~~The collapse of the Assad regime in Syria is a historic moment. It marks the end of a brutal regime that has caused immense suffering and displacement. The Syrian people deserve a peaceful and democratic future. The European Union should support the Syrian people in their struggle for freedom and justice. We must ensure that the transition to a new government is inclusive and respects human rights. The EU should also provide humanitarian aid to the Syrian people and support the reconstruction of the country. We must not let the Syrian people down. We must stand with them in their fight for a better future.~~

~~Supporting the Syrian people in their fight for a better future is a moral imperative for the European Union. We must ensure that the transition to a new government is inclusive and respects human rights. The EU should also provide humanitarian aid to the Syrian people and support the reconstruction of the country. We must not let the Syrian people down. We must stand with them in their fight for a better future.~~

Background:

The fall of Bashar al-Assad's regime brings an end to 54 years of brutality, repression, and terror. Over 500,000 lives were lost during the civil war in the last 13 years, millions were displaced, and an peaceful and just transition to a new government.
